

that he and Stephen sailed without the letter of marque; probably changed the Arrow's nameboards? We doubt that the Customs Service was, in all this confusion and alarm, enrolling many vessels from the Port of New York. Enoch said, you'll recall "No one knows who is his Commander!"

5) Without papers the Arrow, if armed and captured by the British, would have been considered truly a Pirate and there would have been considerable yardarm human bunting flapping in the wind?

6) Or, August is hurricane-weather, and said Rebecca in her letter, "Uncle Enoch says that she (the Brig) is intended for a warm climate and he does not apprehend much fighting will be done. But I cannot bear to think of a privateer!"

Well, that's our mystery. What do you think? Did the "privateer-built" brig Arrow become a "pirate-built" brig of unrecorded name; a vessel of high spars and narrow
